Project Description

U.S. Embassies and Consulates must be prepared to assist private U.S. citizens overseas during a crisis. From natural disasters, to civil unrest, to terrorist attacks, Consular Crisis Management (CCM) is charged with ensuring all of our missions are trained to respond to a myriad of crisis events.

This high-profile project will charge the VSFS to research the type and location of various crises overseas and utilizing

CCM provides a variety of trainings to posts overseas to help them be better prepared to handle crises ranging from natural disasters to terrorist attacks and civil unrest. For the last 2 years CCM has been collecting quantifiable data on these training programs. This project involves three main portions. First, analyze the existing data. Answer questions like: Where are we doing the most training? How has this changed over time? How do real world events affect our trainings?
